Vermont History in February

February 1, 1895 The red clover became the Vermont state flower. Clover was introduced to Vermont by farmers who used it to feed their animals.

February 2, 1891 Electricity lights the streets of Newport for the first time. "A village without electric lights ain't much of a village," wrote the Newport newspaper.

February 3, 1903 Vermont's state-wide prohibition of alcohol ended. Towns gained the option to allow alcohol use or not. Towns voted each year on this decision. However during prohibition, people could not make, sell, or drink alcohol.

February 4, 1870 Lucy Stone, Julia Ward Howe, and many other famous American heroines spoke at the Women's Suffrage Convention held in Montpelier.

February 5, 1887 Vermont's most famous train wreck occurred at White River Junction when the Montreal Express derailed on the huge bridge that crossed the river. Many people were killed in the fall. More lost their lives as the wooden passenger cars and railroad bridge caught fire and burned.

February 7, 1865 Wilson "Snowflake" Bentley was born in Jericho, Vermont. He was the first person to photograph snowflakes and discover that no two were alike.

February 12, 1781 Judah Spooner and Tim Green began publishing Vermont's first newspaper, the Vermont Gazette, in Westminster.

February 14, 1978 The Vermont state lottery was held for the first time.

February 17, 1789 Ethan Allen was buried in Burlington. He is famous for leading the Green Mountain Boys to capture Fort Ticonderoga at the start of the Revolutionary War.

February 18, 1791 The U.S. Congress votes unanimously in favor of admitting Vermont to the United States. The date for admission is set for March 4.

February 20, 1779 Vermont adopts the first state seal. Ira Allen, Ethan's brother, designed it and Reuben Dean, a printer, carved it.

February 22, 1876 The Second Pavilion Hotel opened next to the Vermont State House in Montpelier. It was known as the Third House because so many legislators stayed there. The hotel closed in 1966. In 1970, it was torn down and rebuilt as an office building.
